FROM THE ARTISTIC DIRECTORS

If this is your first time seeing a Refracted show, we're psyched you're here. Welcome! You're joining us for a really good one.

In so many ways, Tambo & Bones is the quintessence of the theatre that Refracted came to Chicago to create. As Artistic Directors, we consider scrupulously about what work most perfectly embodies our mission: theatre that breaks open the form, in order to break open a complex topic that most people would rather shy away from. The theatre Refracted creates is as engaging, hilarious and spectacular as it is impactful and thought-provoking.

We feel honored to present the first ever Chicago production of Tambo & Bones, as we feel it does just that. This play is deeply complex, but the packaging in which it is delivered is wildly entertaining and defies expectation. Our inimitably talented director Mikael Burke said it best when he said that sometimes Dave Harris, the playwright, almost allows us to "forget" what we are talking about, because we are having so much fun. That is Refracted: the paradigm shift towards nuance that you didn't know was coming, that leaves you hungry to rethink and re-feel.

"I think if theater were a verb, it would be 'to remember.'" - Anne Bogart, Theatre Director

Our hope is that you, the audience, might leave with a sense of rearrangement, or at the very least, remembering: remembering your potential for impact, and the power that your compassion in action has in this world.

We could not possibly convey to you the amount of tenacity, courage and passion that our team of designers, actors and technicians has put into this production. For a young company in its second year in a new city to take on a show of this size and scope was a big lift, and we have the work of our talented, dedicated team to thank for making this dream come true. We are endlessly grateful to them, and to our supporters, without whom none of this would exist. And of course, we are indebted to the playwright, Dave Harris, for trusting us with bringing his magical brain-baby to life for its first ever production in the Windy City.

We aim to be your theater, and we take that responsibility seriously. This play does not hold back. Please know that as your theater, this physical space is your space tonight. You can sit here for several minutes if you need to after the show to process. You can reach out to either of us (tova@refractedco.com and graham@refractedco.com) if you would like someone to listen as you process this experience. If you want more tools to digest this, we are here to offer you those. We are here for you.

If you feel impacted by this experience tonight in a way that makes you wanna talk about it, talk about it. Word of mouth is the number one way you can help us make sure everyone gets to experience this powerful work.

Now buckle up. You're in for one hell of a ride.

DIVE INTO DRAMATURGY WITH DRAMATURG KENYA ANN HALL

We know you know their names, but you might not know their story. Dramaturg Kenya Ann Hall helped us discover the ins and outs of the history behind "the clowns." (Warning: this page contains historic racist depictions of Black people.)

TAMBO AND BONES: THE STORY BEHIND THE NAMES

*"A MINSTREL SHOW. IT---IT WAS WHEN WHITE N*GGAS WOULD PRETEND TO BE REAL N*GGAS TO GET PAID."*
- TAMBO

Tambo and Bones originally appeared as stock characters in minstrel shows. The creation of the minstrel show can be attributed to T.D. Rice around 1828. Legend has it that he saw a Black man dancing by a horse and singing a song, and Rice tried to emulate this through a character he named "Jim Crow". He painted his face black, put on some shabby clothes, and thus the practice of White people performing grotesque, inaccurate and humiliating versions of Black life was born.

T.D. Rice's character Jim Crow became so popular that the minstrel show was expanded to include a host of stock characters including this play's featured subjects, Tambo and Bones. The popularity of the minstrel show also forced Black people into performing these humiliating depictions because White venues, for the most part, would not allow Black performers to do anything else.

Tambo and Bones are so named for the instruments they played during the show. Tambo was often featured with a tambourine and Bones was featured with a version of cassettes that were called "bones" since they were originally made of bones. The duo often flanked the Interlocutor, who was a genteel and proper White man that emceed the show. They were dressed in tattered clothes and did bits with each other between acts. And Tambo and Bones were always the

TRUE REPRESENTATION: HOW WE FIGHT FOR AUTHENTICITY

"YOU THOUGHT YOU WAS GONNA SING A SONG ABOUT RACISM AND CHANGE THE WORLD."

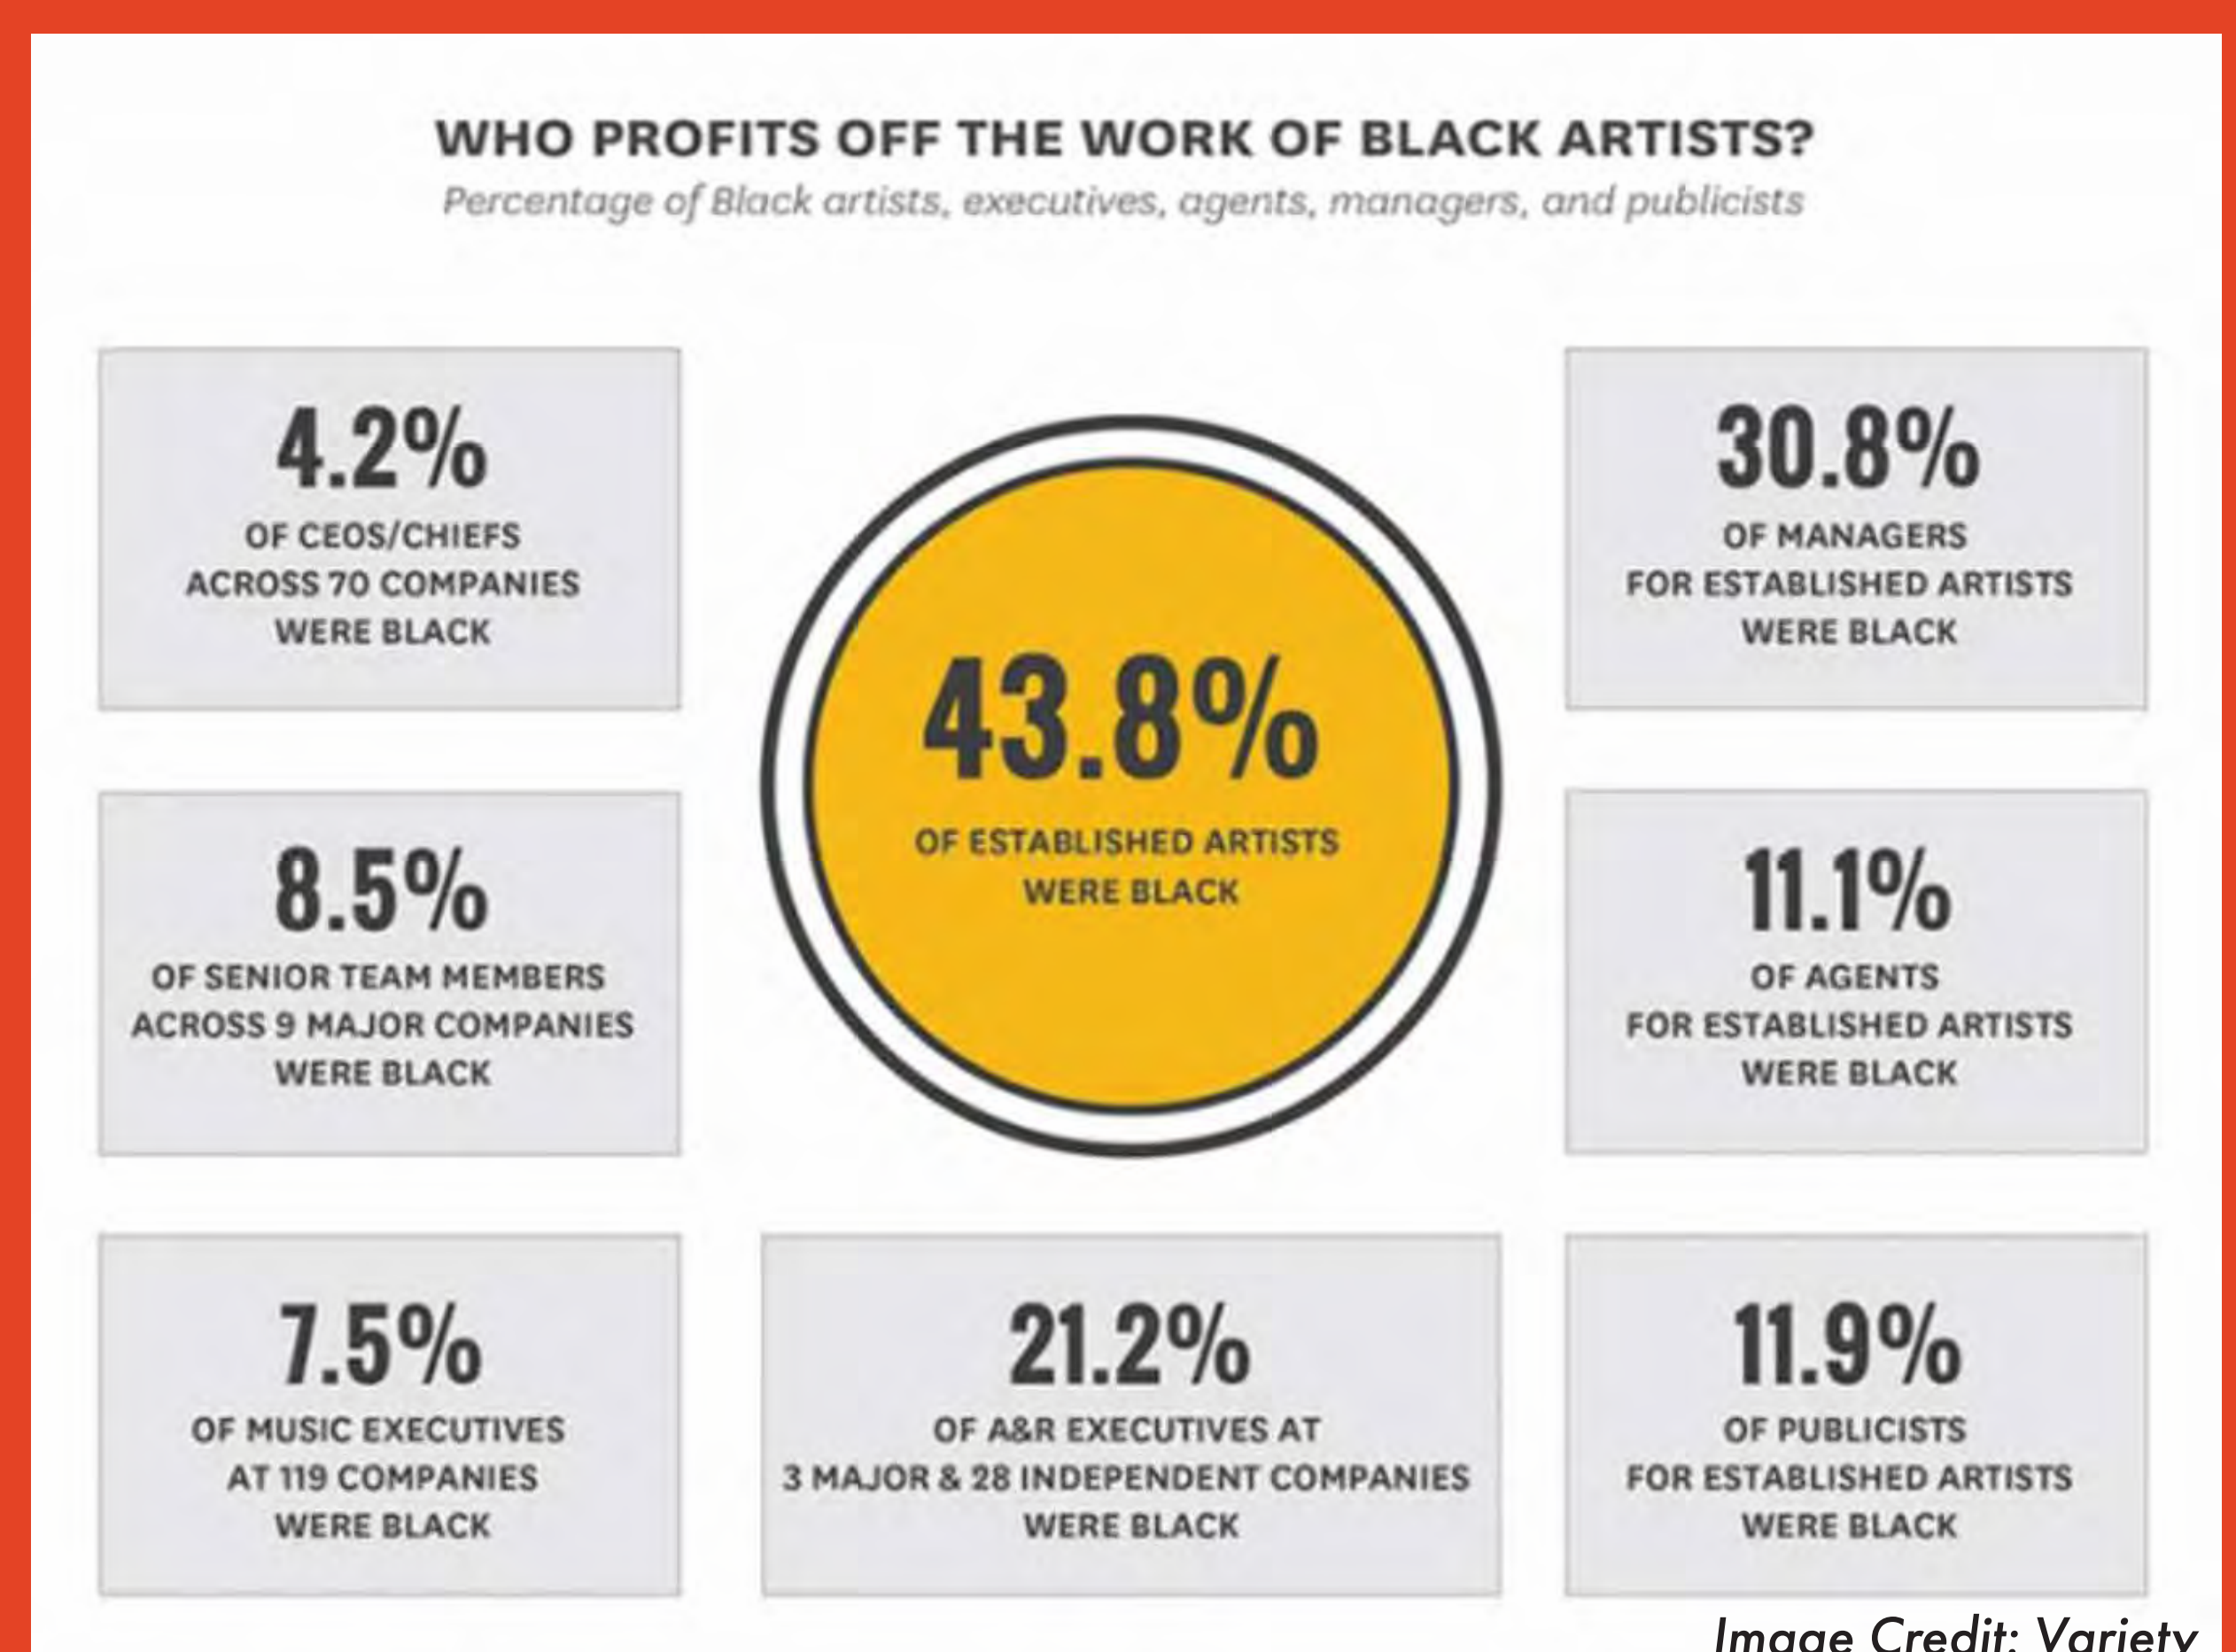

- BONES

From the dawn of the minstrel show, performance has consistently been the widest avenue for Black people to showcase themselves to the world. Even today there are many White people whose only interactions with Black people (and people of color in general) are through music and film. The unfortunate truth in that is, when the platform of performance is owned by White people, the stories of Black people are consequently diluted. In the music episode of The 1619 Project, cultural critic Wesley Morris speaks on how detrimental the minstrel show being the first mainstream avenue for Black performance was to the image of Black people in America. He says,

"THE IDEA THAT WHITE PEOPLE GOT TO TELL THIS COUNTRY WHO BLACK PEOPLE WERE BEFORE BLACK PEOPLE EVEN HAD THE RIGHT TO PERFORM IN THEIR OWN NAME IS WHAT GOT US INTO THIS MESS."

Unfortunately, White people remain in control of Black narratives because they maintain ownership over the movie studios, the record labels and the theatres. For example, the CEO's of the biggest three record labels, Warner, Sony, and Universal, are all White men.

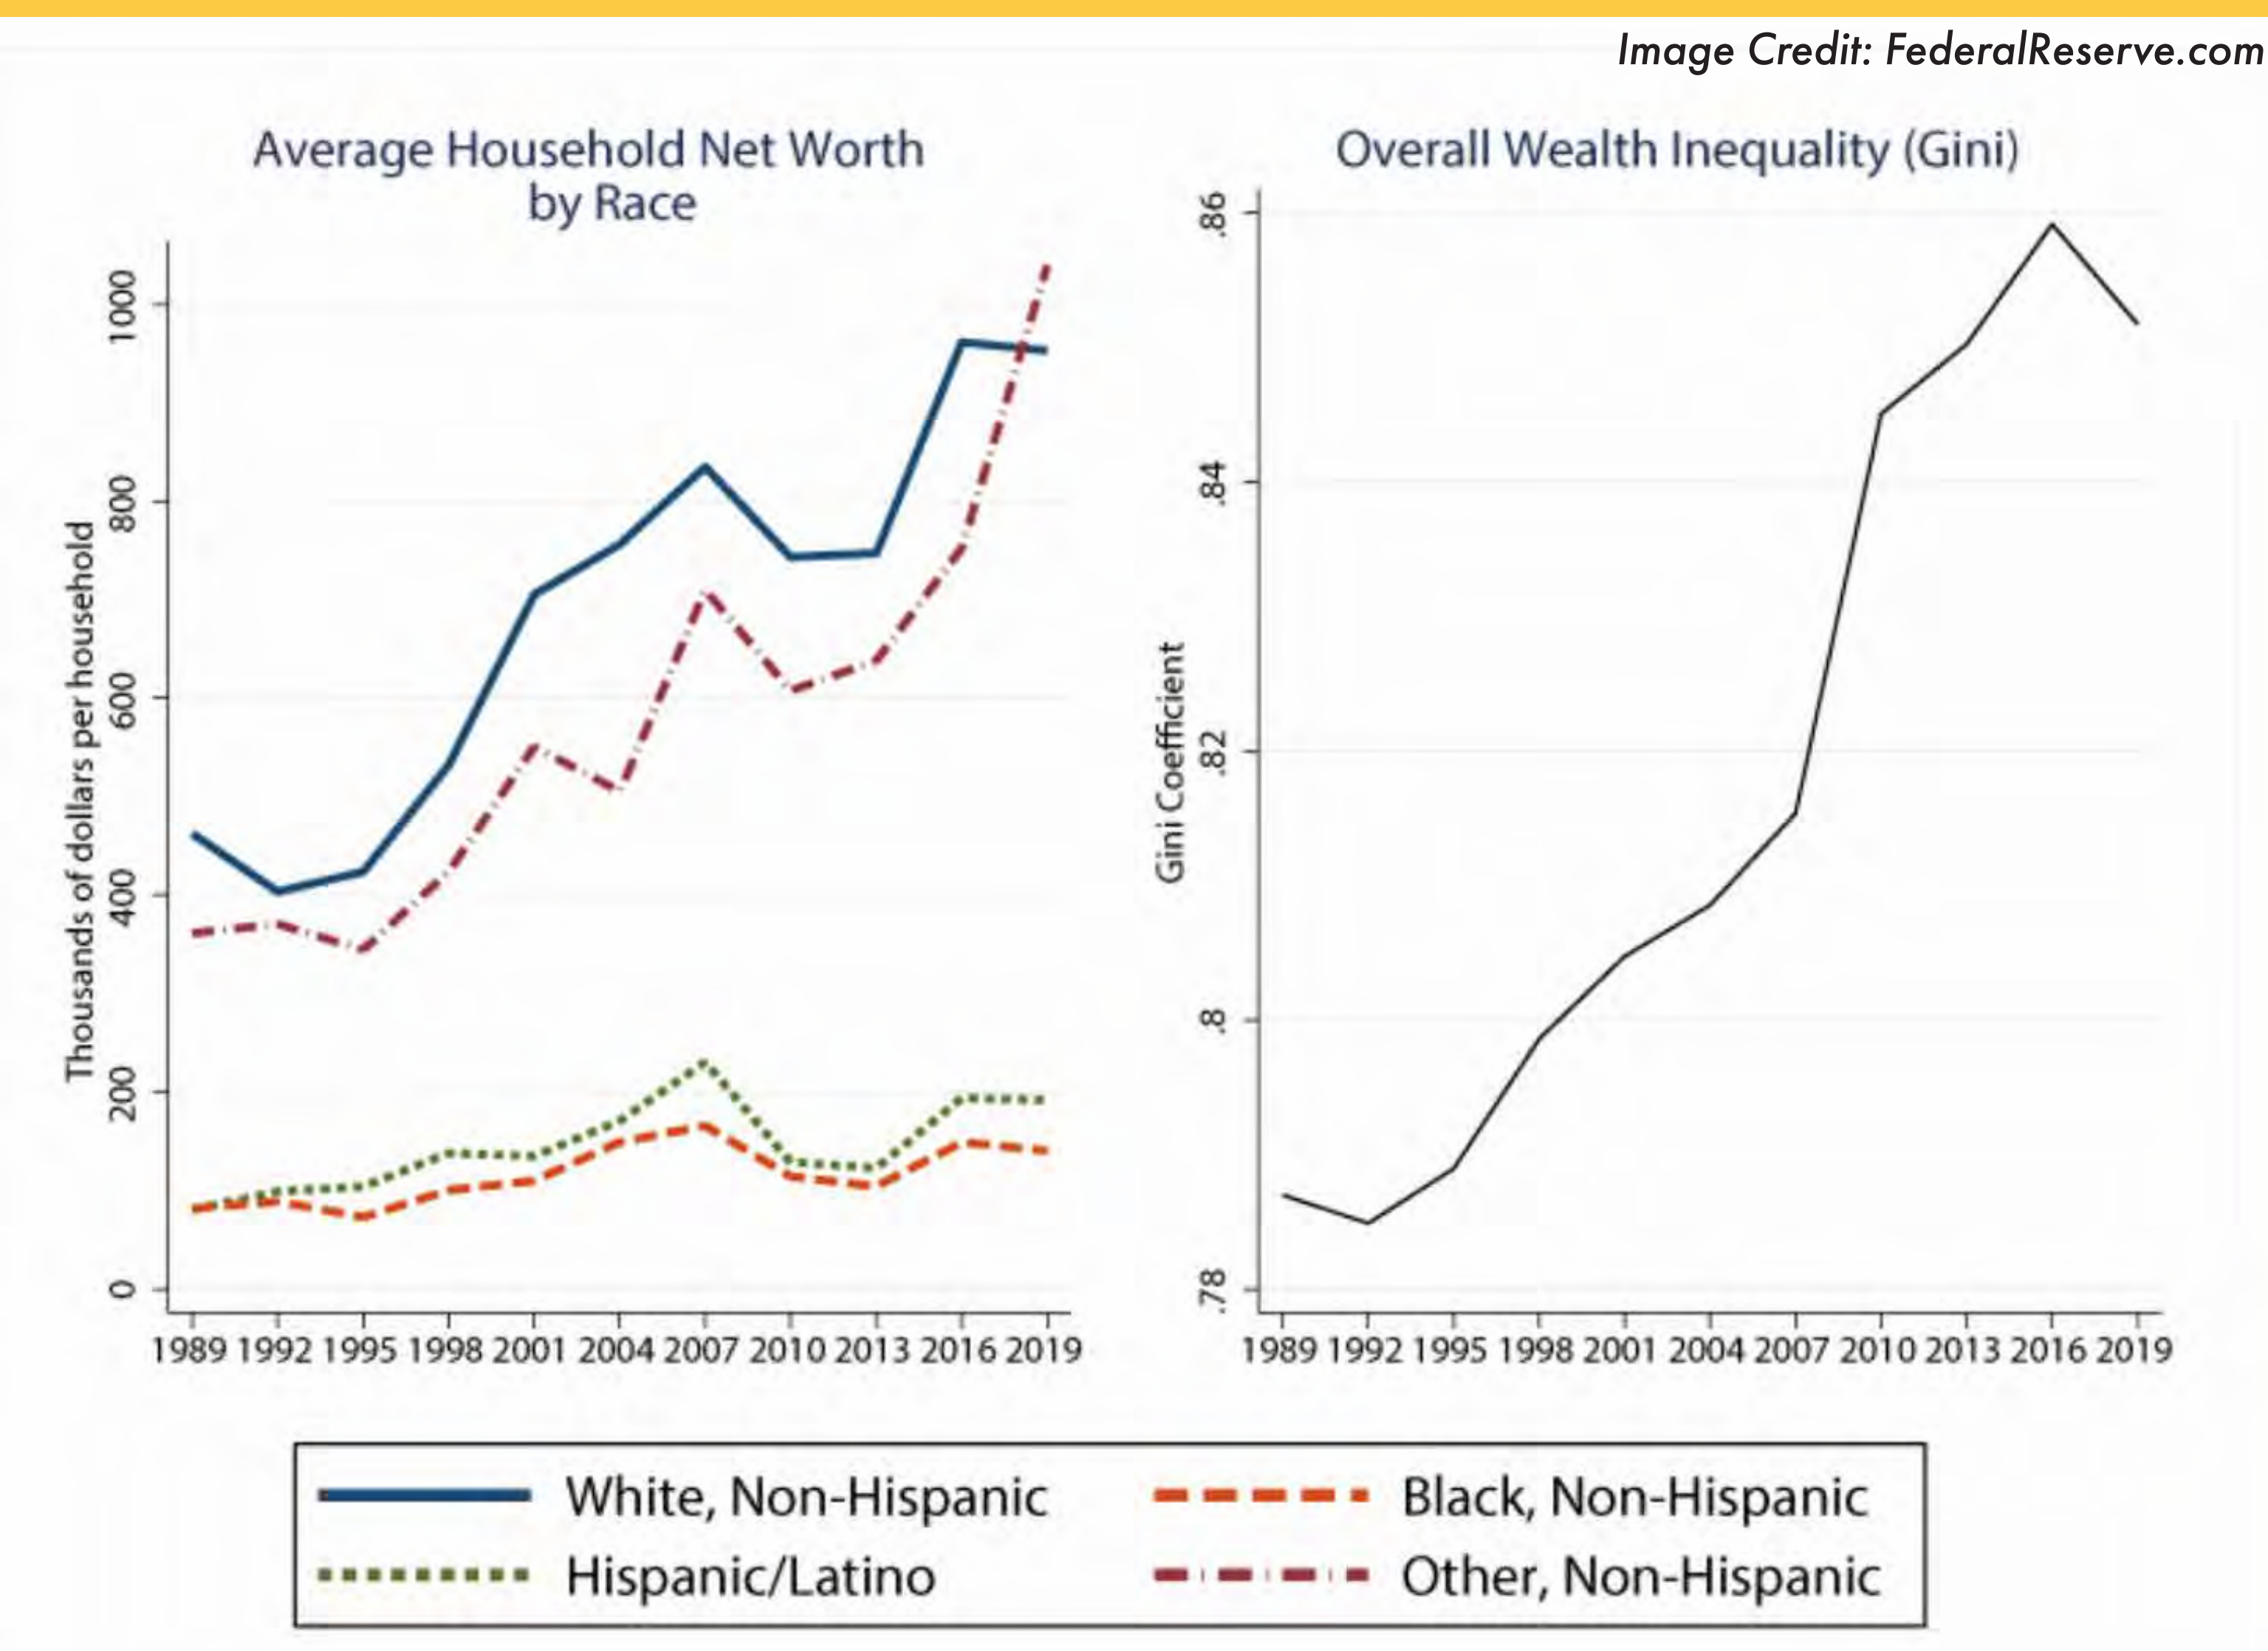

Despite this major obstacle, Black people have found ways to let their authenticity and political messages shine through. However, representation is a double-edged sword. On one side you have to make the right kind of art, palatable to the masses. In some cases, that requires a sacrifice of authenticity. On the other side, if you manage to break through and present something revolutionary, once it gains mainstream success is it still revolutionary?

REFRACTED QUESTION: DOES REPRESENTATION REALLY MATTER?

DOLLARS TO DREAMS: BUYING OUT SYSTEMIC OPPRESSION

"F*CK THERE'S GOTTA BE SO MANY QUARTERS OUT THERE!"
-TAMBO

"Black Capitalism," a term made popular by Richard Nixon to attract Black voters, is the concept that if Black people can amass their own wealth that is proportional to the percentage of society they represent, then they can provide their communities with the resources to end poverty and uplift themselves. This projects an individual responsibility onto

Black people that are able to break into higher tax brackets, but does not address the larger systematic disenfranchisement (including but not limited to unjust housing policies aka "redlining," a lack of educational resources, unjust incarceration and interpersonal bias) that will stunt any individual much less an entire community from being able to achieve the "American Dream."

But what if you do "make it"? Tambo and Bones choose rap careers as their way to the top. While the origins of hip hop are linked to poverty and the societal ills it manifests, the genre has always been imbued with the idea that money is power. However, once Hip Hop became mainstream and rappers started making a lot of money, the proverbial "struggle" began to clash with the reality of the new rapper lifestyle. How can you continue to sell an aspirational lifestyle born from the hustle when you are the only one who made it out?

The article "How Do We Build Black Wealth? Understanding the Limits of Black Capitalism" in Non-Profit Quarterly discusses the futility of building enough wealth to bridge the racial economic gap. Francisco Pérez writes:

"Even if promoting Black capitalism could close the racial wealth gap, is our vision of a just society in the US simply one where the top one percent is roughly 13 percent Black, 18 percent Latinx, six percent Asian, and 1.5 percent Native American—ie, one where the elite looks more like the mass of workers it exploits? Is massive wealth inequality justified so long as it is not racialized?"

LAND ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

We'll be honest:

We acknowledge that this show takes place on land that was stolen from Indigenous people by colonial invaders and with the support of the United States government. However we found our "land acknowledgement" that did not create any actual change for Indigenous folks felt performative.

Please consider making a $3 donation to one of these organizations that help Indigenous Americans get the resources they need.

IF EVERY AUDIENCE MEMBER THAT CAME TO SEE THIS SHOW DONATES $3 TO ONE OF THESE ORGANIZATIONS, WE WOULD RAISE $2,760 FOR INDIGENOUS PEOPLE OVER THE COURSE OF THIS RUN. NOW THAT'S IMPACT.

Please consider donating $3 to:

First Nations Garden - they run a garden that is a community healing and education space for First Nations peoples, right here in Albany Park.

Native American Heritage Foundation- they provide health and food essentials to Native Americans who need it most in South Dakota and Wyoming.

BLACK LABOR ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

We acknowledge that the prosperity afforded to White Americans in the United States of America is a result of the forceful labor of enslaved Black people, and the continued systems of White Supremacy that disenfranchise Black Americans to this day. We acknowledge that Refracted has benefited from that system of White Supremacy. We acknowledge that Chicago remains a segregated city, suffering from the effects of years of inequity. And we recognize that the prison system acts as a way of continuing to unjustly control and disenfranchise Black and Brown bodies, often forcing them into unpaid labor.

Refracted is committed to an ongoing respect for the history and current reality of the contributions Black people have made to this country, as well as to our own education of the ways we can fight racism inside and outside our organization.

Which is why we are partnering with Storycatchers Theater, to close the gap between incarcerated youths and the art that they deserve to see.

Please go to the "SPONSOR A TICKET" section of this program to learn how you can help us close that gap.

SPONSOR A TICKET

This show centers an important conversation about what it costs to turn your pain into art. We are partnering with Storycatchers Theatre to bring young, currently detained individuals who are using music and theater to tell their stories to see Tambo & Bones. Our opportunity for action for you as an audience member is for you to sponsor a ticket for a young person from Storycatchers to be able to see a show they would never otherwise be able to experience.

TO SPONSOR A TICKET:

- 1) Click the button below, which will take you to The Den's ticketing page
- 2) Click on any performance (it doesn't matter which one you choose, as long as it's one that isn't sold out.)
- 3) Under the "Give a Ticket: In Partnership" option, select from the drop down menu the number of tickets you would like to sponsor
- 4) Add the tickets to your cart, and check out the way you normally would to purchase tickets

SPONSOR TICKETS

You're done!

The Den Theater will make sure the ticket gets transferred to a Storycatchers Theater participant who will get to see the show because of you. Thank you for your generosity!
